Note: For most local governments, the fiscal year is the calendar year. The school district fiscal year is July 1 through June 30.

- The bill permits counties with populations of more than 100,000 to use up to $3 million annually in Delinquent Tax and Assessment Collection (DTAC) funds to assist municipalities and townships abate nuisance residential properties that are in foreclosure. Twenty-eight counties meet this criterion.

- The bill also permits eligible counties to use DTAC moneys to pay for the prosecution of certain violations of real estate law, such as mortgage fraud and other similar violations. This could potentially allow prosecutors to more aggressively pursue such violations.

- The bill authorizes county treasurers to apply the proceeds from the sale of foreclosed residential properties toward property taxes that remain a lien against the property. This would reduce what these proceeds would otherwise be used for. However, if a purchaser does not have to pay any unpaid taxes, such properties could be sold more quickly or at a higher price than if property taxes were still owed.

Detailed Fiscal Analysis

Background

This bill adds to the purposes for which qualifying counties may use excess Delinquent Tax and Assessment Collection (DTAC) funds. The bill permits counties with populations of 100,000 or more to spend up to $3 million in surplus DTAC moneys to (1) assist municipalities and townships with nuisance abatement of foreclosed residential property, and (2) provide additional funding for county prosecutors to pursue criminal and civil real estate transaction-related violations of the law. The bill also eliminates uncodified authority provided in the FY 2008-FY 2009 budget that, in addition to the additional purposes just described, allows Cuyahoga County to use excess DTAC moneys for preventing residential foreclosures. According to the "Ohio County Indicators" report of June 2007 published by the Department of Development's Office of Strategic Research, 28 counties meet the population threshold in the bill. Of those, it is not clear how many of these counties maintain excess funds that could be used for the purposes described in the bill.

Eligible counties—use of DTAC funds

It would be difficult to predict how eligible counties might use these moneys. In some cases, counties might opt to help municipalities and townships raze nuisance property. In other cases, county officials might direct the additional DTAC resources toward prosecuting mortgage fraud and other related real estate violations. Treasurer's offices in nine counties provided LSC with information on their DTAC fund balances at the beginning of May 2008. This information is summarized in the following table.

County	DTAC Fund Balance
Allen	$367,132
Clark	$801,043
Cuyahoga*	$9,000,000
Fairfield	$488,687
Franklin	$9,881,914
Lorain	$565,576
Lucas	$1,399,343
Miami	$290,854
Montgomery*	$8,600,000

* Estimate provided by county.

Both Franklin and Cuyahoga counties indicated that they would use excess DTAC funds for nuisance abatement. However, it is not certain how many of the counties listed in the table or the other 19 eligible counties would use their DTAC funds to pursue criminal and civil real estate transaction-related violations of the law. Presumably, these decisions would depend on the extent to which county officials regard foreclosed nuisance properties or real estate law violations as problems in their communities.

County treasurer—property tax liens

The bill requires any sale proceeds to be applied to property taxes that are a lien on property when the deed is transferred. Since the lien attaches on January 1 for taxes that do not become payable until one year later, the bill would have the effect of generally requiring an additional year's taxes to be paid out of the sale proceeds. Ultimately, this provision does not alter the total proceeds gained from the sale of this property, therefore there is no revenue gained or lost due to this provision.
