BILL SUMMARY

- Extends the job creation tax credit to domestic and foreign insurance companies and to dealers in intangibles.

CONTENT AND OPERATION

Extension of the job creation tax credit to insurance companies and dealers in intangibles

Background

Dealers in intangibles are subject to an annual tax on their intangible personal property, which is in lieu of the corporation franchise tax. A dealer in intangibles is defined as any person that maintains an office or other place of business in Ohio and who is engaged in the business of lending money, or discounting, buying, or selling bills of exchange, drafts, acceptances, notes, mortgages, or other evidences of indebtedness from its place of business. A dealer in intangibles also includes every person who is engaged in the business of buying or selling bonds, stock, or other investment securities from a place of business in Ohio, whether on its own account or as an agent or broker for others, provided that there is an expectation of profit. The tax on dealers in intangibles is based on an assessment of each dealer's shares of capital stock or on each dealer's property representing its capital employed in the state. The tax rate is eight mills on the dollar (0.8%).

Domestic and foreign insurance companies also pay special taxes in lieu of the corporation franchise tax. Currently, domestic and foreign insurance companies are taxed at a rate of 1.4% of the gross amount of premiums received from policies covering risks within Ohio.

Under current law, Ohio's Tax Credit Authority may enter into agreements with employers whereby the employer agrees to increase employment in Ohio in exchange for tax credits against the corporation franchise tax (corporations) or the personal income tax (owners of most partnerships, limited liability companies, S corporations, and sole proprietorships). The credit is refundable, which means that a taxpayer is entitled to a refund if the amount of the credit exceeds the taxpayer's tax liability. Dealers in intangibles and domestic and foreign insurance companies cannot benefit from the credit.

Job creation tax credit extended to insurance companies and dealers in intangibles

(R.C. 122.17, 5707.051, 5725.32, and 5729.032)

The bill extends the job creation tax credit to dealers in intangibles and domestic and foreign insurance companies by allowing these entities to claim the credit against the special taxes that apply to them. Under the bill, all of the existing administrative procedures relating to the job creation tax credit apply with respect to dealers in intangibles and insurance companies.
