Detailed Fiscal Analysis

The bill allows any individual to perform automated external defibrillation, regardless of whether the individual has completed training on the use of an automated external defibrillator (AED). The bill requires an individual who possesses an AED to encourage expected users to complete an automated external defibrillation and cardiopulmonary resuscitation training course offered or approved by a nationally recognized organization. The bill also removes a current law provision which requires individuals who possess an AED to consult with a physician regarding compliance of law requirements. The bill does not have a direct fiscal effect on state or local governments.
