COMMENT

The National Statuary Hall Collection in the U.S. Capitol is comprised of statues donated by individual states to honor persons notable in their history. All states are invited to contribute two statues for display. As of 2006, there are 100 statues donated by 50 states. Kansas has replaced one of its two statues.

Ohio designated its two statues in the 1880s: James A. Garfield and William Allen. Allen served one term as Governor from 1874 to 1876.
