CONTENT AND OPERATION

Abolishment of the death penalty in Ohio

The bill abolishes the death penalty in Ohio. A trial court that sentenced an offender to death prior to the effective date of the bill must conduct a hearing to resentence the offender. At the resentencing hearing, the court must impose upon the offender a sentence of life imprisonment without parole.¹

New sentencing for aggravated murder

The bill generally requires a person who is convicted of or pleads guilty to aggravated murder (see "Death penalty – current law," below, for elements of the offense of aggravated murder) to be sentenced to one of three options:²

(1) Life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 20 full years of imprisonment;

(2) Life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 30 full years of imprisonment;

(3) Life imprisonment without parole.

Additionally, if a person is convicted of or pleads guilty to aggravated murder, the victim of the offense was less than 13 years of age, and the offender also is convicted of or pleads guilty to a sexual motivation specification (see "Definitions," below) that was included in the indictment, count in the indictment, or information charging the offense, the court must impose an indefinite prison term of 30 years to life. If a person is convicted of or pleads guilty to aggravated murder and also is convicted of or pleads guilty to a sexual motivation specification and a sexually violent predator specification (see "Definitions," below) that were included in the indictment, count in the indictment, or information that charged the murder, the court must impose upon the offender a term of life imprisonment without parole.³

Fines

The bill retains the provision that in addition to any prison term imposed, an offender may be fined an amount fixed by the court, but not more than $25,000 for aggravated murder or $15,000 for murder.⁴

⁴ R.C. 2929.02(D).

Resentencing of offenders whose sentences were previously set aside, nullified, or vacated

Under the bill, an offender whose sentence of death has been set aside, nullified, or vacated pursuant to R.C. 2929.06 (see "Resentencing hearings under current law," below) as it existed immediately before the effective date of the bill but who has not been resentenced under that section as of the effective date of the bill must be resentenced in accordance with that section as it existed immediately before the effective date of the bill.⁵

Resentencing hearings under current law

Under current law, the trial court that sentenced the offender must conduct a hearing to resentence the offender if a sentence of death is set aside, nullified, or vacated for any of the following reasons:⁶

(1) The court of appeals, in a case in which a sentence of death was imposed for an offense committed before January 1, 1995, could not affirm the sentence of death under the standards imposed by R.C. 2929.05.

(2) The Supreme Court, in cases in which the Supreme Court reviews the sentence upon appeal, could not affirm the sentence of death under the standards imposed by R.C. 2929.05.

(3) The statutory procedure for imposing the sentence of death is unconstitutional.

(4) The court of common pleas vacates the sentence because the offender did not present evidence at trial that the offender was not 18 years of age or older at the time of the commission of the aggravated murder for which the offender was sentenced and if the offender shows by a preponderance of the evidence that the offender was less than 18 years of age at the time of the commission of the aggravated murder for which the offender was sentenced.

(5) A court has determined that the offender is mentally retarded under standards set forth in decisions of the Supreme Court of this state or the United States Supreme Court.

At the resentencing hearing, the court must impose upon the offender a sentence of life imprisonment or an indefinite term consisting of a minimum term of 30 years and a maximum term of life imprisonment. If the Revised Code as it existed at the time the offender committed the aggravated murder for which the sentence of death was imposed required the imposition of either of the following when a sentence of death was not imposed, the court must impose the sentence so required:

(1) A sentence of life imprisonment without parole;

(2) A sentence of an indefinite term consisting of a minimum term of 30 years and a maximum term of life imprisonment pursuant to a sexually violent predator specification.

In all other cases, the sentences of life imprisonment that are available at the hearing, and from which the court must impose sentence, must be the same sentences of life imprisonment that were available under the Revised Code as it existed at the time the offender committed the offense for which the sentence of death was imposed.

Right to post-conviction DNA testing

An offender who was sentenced to death before the effective date of the bill will have the same right to post-conviction DNA testing as the offender had under the DNA testing provisions of the Revised Code as they existed immediately before the effective date of the bill or as they may hereafter be amended.⁷

Reimbursements for counties' costs and expenses of conducting defense in capital cases

Under current law, the State Public Defender must reimburse 50% of all costs and expenses of conducting the defense in capital cases to each county.⁸ The total amount of money paid to all counties in any fiscal year pursuant to that requirement for the reimbursement of a percentage of the counties' costs and expenses of conducting the defense in capital cases must not exceed the total amount appropriated for that fiscal year by the General Assembly for the reimbursement of the counties for conducting the defense in capital cases. If the amount appropriated by the General Assembly in any fiscal year is insufficient to pay 50% of the counties' total costs and expenses of conducting the defense in capital cases in the fiscal year, the amount of money paid in that fiscal year to each county for the fiscal year must be reduced proportionately so that each county is paid an equal percentage of its costs and expenses of conducting the defense in capital cases in the fiscal year.⁹

Under the bill, all reports and payments relating to capital cases that were required to be made under the provisions described above as those provisions existed immediately before the effective date of the bill must be made for the current calendar or fiscal year, as applicable, in accordance with those provisions as they existed immediately before the effective date of the bill.¹⁰

Death penalty – current law

Current Ohio law only allows the death penalty for the offense of aggravated murder. Current law prohibits the following acts:¹¹

(1) Purposely, and with prior calculation and design, causing the death of another or the unlawful termination of another's pregnancy;

(2) Purposely causing the death of another or the unlawful termination of another's pregnancy while committing or attempting to commit, or while fleeing immediately after committing or attempting to commit, kidnapping, rape, aggravated arson, arson, aggravated robbery, robbery, aggravated burglary, burglary, terrorism, or escape;

(3) Purposely causing the death of another who is under 13 years of age at the time of the commission of the offense;

(4) Purposely causing the death of another when the person is under detention as a result of having been found guilty of or having pleaded guilty to a felony or who has broken that detention;

(5) Purposely causing the death of a law enforcement officer whom the offender knows or has reasonable cause to know is a law enforcement officer when either of the following applies:

(a) The victim, at the time of the commission of the offense, is engaged in the victim's duties.

(b) It is the offender's specific purpose to kill a law enforcement officer.

⁹ R.C. 120.34.

¹⁰ Section 3, division (C).

¹¹ R.C. 2903.01.

Whoever violates one of these prohibitions is guilty of aggravated murder and must either be sentenced to life imprisonment or if the death penalty is applicable, death, as discussed below.¹²

Aggravating circumstances

The death penalty may only be imposed if the indictment or count in the indictment specifies one of the following aggravating circumstances, and the aggravating circumstance is proved beyond a reasonable doubt. These aggravating circumstances include any of the following:¹³

(1) The offense was the assassination of the President of the United States or a person in line of succession to the presidency, the Governor or Lieutenant Governor of Ohio, the President-elect or Vice President-elect of the United States, the Governor-elect or Lieutenant Governor-elect of Ohio, or a candidate for any of these offices.

(2) The offense was committed for hire.

(3) The offense was committed for the purpose of escaping detection, apprehension, trial, or punishment for another offense committed by the offender.

(4) The offense was committed while the offender was under certain types of detention or while the offender was at large after having broken detention.

(5) Prior to the offense at bar, the offender was convicted of an offense an essential element of which was the purposeful killing of or attempt to kill another, or the offense at bar was part of a course of conduct involving the purposeful killing of or attempt to kill two or more persons by the offender.

(6) The victim of the offense was a law enforcement officer, whom the offender had reasonable cause to know or knew to be a law enforcement officer, and either the victim, at the time of the commission of the offense, was engaged in the victim's duties, or it was the offender's specific purpose to kill a law enforcement officer.

(7) The offense was committed while the offender was committing, attempting to commit, or fleeing immediately after committing or attempting to commit kidnapping, rape, aggravated arson, aggravated robbery, or aggravated burglary, and either the offender was the principal offender in the commission of the aggravated murder or, if not the principal offender, committed the aggravated murder with prior calculation and design.

(8) The victim of the aggravated murder was a witness to an offense who was purposely killed to prevent the victim's testimony in any criminal proceeding, and the aggravated murder was not committed during the commission, attempted commission, or flight immediately after the commission or attempted commission of the offense to which the victim was a witness, or the victim of the aggravated murder was a witness to an offense and was purposely killed in retaliation for the victim's testimony in any criminal proceeding.

(9) The offender, in the commission of the offense, purposefully caused the death of another who was under 13 years of age at the time of the commission of the offense, and either the offender was the principal offender in the commission of the offense or, if not the principal offender, committed the offense with prior calculation and design.

(10) The offense was committed while the offender was committing, attempting to commit, or fleeing immediately after committing or attempting to commit terrorism.

Mitigating circumstances

If one or more of the aggravating circumstances listed above is specified in the indictment or count in the indictment and proved beyond a reasonable doubt, and if the offender did not raise the matter of age, as discussed below in "Juveniles are not subject to the death penalty" or if the offender, after raising the matter of age, was found at trial to have been 18 years of age or older at the time of the commission of the offense, the trial judge and trial jury, or panel of three judges (depending on who tried the case) must determine whether the death penalty is to be imposed. In determining whether to impose the death penalty, the jury, and if the jury recommends a sentence of death, trial judge or the panel of three judges must consider, and weigh against the aggravating circumstances, all of the following:¹⁴

(1) A pre-sentence investigation report, if the defendant requests it;

(2) A report regarding a mental examination of the defendant, if the defendant requests it;

(3) Any evidence raised at trial that is relevant to the aggravating circumstances the defendant was found guilty of committing;

¹⁴ R.C. 2929.03(D)(1) and 2929.04(B).

(4) The nature and circumstances of the aggravating circumstances;

(5) The history, character, and background of the offender;

(6) Whether the victim of the offense induced or facilitated the offense;

(7) Whether it is unlikely that the offense would have been committed, but for the fact that the offender was under duress, coercion, or strong provocation;

(8) Whether, at the time of committing the offense, the offender, because of a mental disease or defect, lacked substantial capacity to appreciate the criminality of the offender's conduct or to conform the offender's conduct to the requirements of the law;

(9) The youth of the offender;

(10) The offender's lack of a significant history of prior criminal convictions and delinquency adjudications;

(11) If the offender was a participant in the offense but not the principal offender, the degree of the offender's participation in the offense and the degree of the offender's participation in the acts that led to the death of the victim;

(12) Any other factors that are relevant to the issue of whether the offender should be sentenced to death;

(13) The statement, if any, of the offender;

(14) The arguments, if any, of counsel for the defense and prosecution.

The defendant must have great latitude in the presentation of evidence of mitigating factors and of any other factors in mitigation of the imposition of the sentence of death. The defendant has the burden of going forward with the evidence of any mitigating factors. The prosecution, then, has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the aggravating circumstances the defendant was found guilty of committing are sufficient to outweigh the mitigating factors.¹⁵

If the trial jury and, if the jury recommends a sentence of death, the court or the panel of three judges finds, by proof beyond a reasonable doubt, that the aggravating circumstances outweigh the mitigating circumstances, the court or panel must impose the death penalty. When the death penalty is imposed, the court or panel must state in a separate opinion its specific findings as to the existence of any of the mitigating factors, the aggravating circumstances the offender was found guilty of committing, and the reasons why the aggravating circumstances were sufficient to outweigh the mitigating factors.¹⁶

If an offender who is convicted of aggravated murder is not sentenced to death, the court must sentence the offender to a term of life imprisonment without parole, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 20 years of imprisonment, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 25 full years of imprisonment, life imprisonment with parole eligibility after serving 30 full years of imprisonment, or an indefinite term consisting of a minimum term of 30 years and a maximum term of life imprisonment, depending on why the sentence of death was not imposed.¹⁷

Appellate review of a death sentence

When a sentence of death is imposed, the appellate court is required to review upon appeal the sentence of death at the same time that it reviews the other issues in the case. The judgment in the case and the sentence of death are to be reviewed in the same manner as any other criminal case, except that the court must review and independently weigh all of the facts and other evidence disclosed in the record in the case, consider the offense and the offender to determine whether the aggravating circumstances the offender was found guilty of committing outweigh the mitigating factors in the case, and consider whether the sentence of death is appropriate. In determining whether the sentence of death is appropriate, the appellate court must consider whether the sentence is excessive or disproportionate to the penalty imposed in similar cases. The court must also review all of the facts and other evidence to determine if the evidence supports the finding of the aggravating circumstances the trial jury or the panel of three judges found the offender guilty of committing and must determine whether the sentencing court properly weighed the aggravating circumstances the offender was found guilty of committing and the mitigating factors. The appellate court may only affirm a sentence of death if the court is persuaded from the record that the aggravating circumstances the offender was found guilty of committing outweigh the mitigating factors present in the case and that the sentence of death is the appropriate sentence in the case.¹⁸

Juveniles are not subject to the death penalty

Current law permits a defendant who is charged with aggravated murder and one or more of the specifications listed above in "Aggravating circumstances" to raise the matter of age at the time of the alleged commission of the offense. The defendant may present evidence at trial that he or she was not 18 at the time of the alleged commission of the offense. The burdens of raising the matter of age and of going forward with the evidence relating to the defendant's age are upon the defendant. After a defendant has raised the matter of age at trial, the prosecution has the burden of proving beyond a reasonable doubt that the defendant was at least 18 years old at the time of the alleged commission of the offense.¹⁹

If a person raises the matter of age and the person is not found to have been at least 18 years old at the time of the alleged commission of the offense, that person cannot be sentenced to death.²⁰
